What makes a Hero?
The following lines by Henry Taylor, author of "Philip Van Arden," are equal to those celebrated ones of Sir William Jones. "What constitutes a State?" after which they seem to have been modeled:
What makes a Hero?—Not success, not fame,
Indolence and the love of ease,
Or gluttony—no, no, no, no, no, no,
Or pen of journalist, with flourish fair,
Bells peal, stars, ribbons, and a titular name—
These, though his rightful tribute, he can spare;
His rightful tribute, not his end or aim,
Or true reward; for never yet did these
Refresh the soul, or set the heart at ease.
—What makes a hero?—An heroic aim,
Expressed in action, in endurance proved;
And if there be pre-eminence of right
Derived thro' pain well suffered, to the light
Of rank heroic, 'tis to bear unmoved,
Not toil, not risk, not rage of sea or wind,
Not the least tinge of barbarous blind,
But pure—ingratitude and poisonous darts
Launched by the country he had served and loved;
This with a free unclouded spirit pure,
This in the strength of silence to endure,
A dignity to noble deeds imparts
Beyond the gauds and trappings of renown;
This is the hero's emblem and crown.
Thus missed, one struggle had been wanting still—
One glorious triumph of the heroic will,
One self-approval in his heart of hearts.

VARIETY.
There seems to be little practical difference between the friend who does you no good and the enemy who does you no harm.
One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the depths of poverty, but not a whole people.
One great reason why men practice so little generosity in the world is that they find so little there—it is catching.
There is as great a difference between what an ambitious man is and what he aspires to be, as between what a vain one is and what he thinks himself.
Generally the difficulty with those who complain of the want of language to express their ideas is the want of ideas to express.
Almost every poet expresses an anxious desire to escape from the city. Generally the city has no objections.
If the world is to be held together by falsehoods, the old, which are already current, are just as good as the new.
Personal respectability is totally independent of a large income. Its greatest secret is self-respect.
Angels in the grave will not question those as to the amount of wealth thou hast left behind thee, but of good deeds thou hast done in the world, to entitle thee to a seat among the blessed.
A man who covers himself with costly apparel and neglects his mind, is like one who illuminates the outside of his house and sits within in the dark.
Singular fact—Maanala in his history of England, states the significant fact that no large society of which the language is not Teutonic (Gothic) has ever turned Protestant; and that whenever a language derived from ancient Rome is spoken, the religion of modern Rome to this day prevails.
He should study the Bible more, says a religious paper of a reporter for a political sheet, who in reporting the outcome of a sermon lately preached in Cincinnati, said the "discourse was founded on a portion of the 12th verse Paul's first epistle to Ephesians." The reporter ought to be sent to Sunday-school!

FRANKLIN'S EPIGRAPH.—It is well known that the celebrated Doctor Franklin was a printer's boy in Boston, and afterwards worked at the trade in the city of Philadelphia. During this period, it is related that he composed the following as a suitable epigram to be placed over his grave:
Here lies good for worms, the body of
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Printer.
Like the cover of an old book,
Its contents torn out
And stripped of its lettering and gilding,
But the work shall not be lost;
It will appear in a new and more beautiful
edition,
Revised and corrected by the AUTHOR.
THE AGED SERVING GOD.—May the old servants of God be dismissed from waiting on him? No—their attendance is still required. Therefore, let them not desert his service. When, through the infirmities of age, they can no longer be working in God's family, yet they may be waiting servants. Those that, like Barzillai, are unfit for the entertainments of the courts of earthly princes, may yet retain the pleasure of God's courts as much as ever.
The Levites when they were past the age of fifty, and were discharged from the tithing part of their ministrations, yet still must wait on God, must be quietly waiting to give honor to him, and to receive comfort from him. Those who have done the will of God, and there will doing is at an end, have need of patience to enable them to wait till they inherit the promise, and the dearest happiness is which they are waiting for, the dearest should the God be they are waiting on, and hope shortly to be with eternally.—Matthew Henry.
Just So.—An Indiana paper tells a good story of a thin, cadaverous looking chap, about fifty years old, who poked his nose into the office of a Health Insurance Company, somewhere in that deck of timber, and held with the agent the following amusing colloquy:
"Ish to men in vot inshures de peopies helts?"
The agent politely answered, "I attend to that business, sir."
"Vell, I want mine helts insured; vot you sharge?"
"Different prices," answered the agent, "from three to ten dollars a year; pay ten dollars a year, and you get ten dollars a week in case of sickness."
"Vell," said Myneher, "I want ten dollars vort now."
The agent inquired his state of health.
"Vell, I sick all te time. I ish stout to bed too or tre hours a tay, unt te doctors heys he can't do no ting more goot for me."
"If that's the state of your health," returned the agent, "we can't insure it. We only insure persons who are in good health."
At this Myneher bristled up in great anger.
"You must stink I'm a fool; vot you tink I come pay you ten dollars for insaure my helts, ven I vos well."
